INDIANAPOLIS, IND., FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 20, 1865.

ÆTNA BUILDING, General Polk.

Reverend General Polk: While the General was in command of the post of Cairo, Bishop General Polk, General A Clergyman, while residing in South America, as a toast, which he said all could drink. Those Free of Charge. present filled their glasses, and he gave, "To General George Washington." As he paused, purposely, at the end of the name, the company self. Address, commenced to drink, when he added, "the first rebel." Gen. Grant had his glass nearly finished by that time, and it was no use to stop, but he exclaimed, "That was scarcely fair, General, but was of course somewhat against him, but the company parted in good humor. Some two weeks afterward, another flag of truce was sent down to Columbus, General Grant accompany-

After business was over, the rebel Generals that they were converting him from the error of ing, he added "white and black." The horror perbox. of the chivalry at being inveigled into drinking such a heretical toast, may easily be imagined, and they were rather disposed to feel angry, until General Grant remarked: "Now, General Polk, I thick I am even with you for that rebel toffit you made me drink at our last conference." Quick to see and appreciate a good joke, the anger of the Southerners was turned into a laugh at the expense of their reverend General, who gracefully acknowledged himself flooked.
